

The American Center of Research

Who & What Are We?

The American Center of Research is an American nonprofit with a facility in Amman, Jordan, where people with curiosity can come together.

Our activities focus on:

- ◇ protection and promotion of cultural heritage.
- ◇ economic development and tourism.
- ◇ skills training and education.
- ◇ women's economic empowerment and leadership.
- ◇ positive youth development.
- ◇ private-sector development.
- ◇ supporting the academic research of others.

Our center in Amman is:

- ◇ a place to have lunch with great conversation and meet new people.
- ◇ a place to learn and study in a robust public library.
- ◇ a place to stay and relax.
- ◇ a place to help you get outside and see the sites (ancient) and experiences of life (modern) in the Middle East, whether you're ready for a desert hike or a ride down a zipline.
- ◇ a place to "get your hands dirty" in the pursuit of knowledge (want to join an archaeological dig with us?!)

The American Center supports and engages with scholars across a broad swath of the social, natural, and physical sciences, the humanities, and the arts. We help make their research accessible to everyone.

You only need to have a sense of curiosity for ACOR to be the place for you!

ACOR is a U.S. nonprofit educational and scientific organization, established in 1968. Our mission is advancing knowledge of Jordan and the interconnected region, past and present.

Bringing people, communities, and cultures together!
